                            Patreon is a membership platform that enables creators to be paid by their fans. One of our core behaviors is to put creators first, and these terms attempt to do that. We know that most people skim through terms of use because they're boring, but we have done everything we can to make this easy to get through. Above every section we'll summarize the most important parts, but these summaries are not legally binding, so please look at the full version

                    This is a commitment to creators. We know this is your livelihood. We invest heavily in making these decisions as fair and transparent as possible. We always want creators to feel like they have an open line of communication. So how does this translate to moderation? Our first reflex is always to try to educate creators to help them understand how a rule has been broken and how to remedy the issue. In cases where the may take further action such as suspending or removing their account. In the most extreme cases we may ban a creator from using Patreon.

                    your membership off our platform. As a result when we talk about "On Patreon," it means the creations you are funding on and through Patreon. When reviewing a page, we look at how
